Helpful Parrot

A crime-fighting parrot saved his owners from a house robbery by frightening two men with his amazing voice skills. The burglars broke into the house by climbing through an open window. They were searching for things when suddenly, out of the darkness, a scary voice screamed, 'What are you doing, you idiot?' Frightened, the thieves ran away.

Charlie the parrot is the pet of teacher, Brian Thomas. 'My wife says, "What are you doing, you idiot?" to me all the time,' says Brian, 'and Charlie has learnt to say it too. He only copies her. He doesn't repeat what I say or anything he hears on television.'

Brian added, 'He's a wonderful bird. He has a cage but he rarely uses it. He just finds a place at night where he wants to sleep and settles down there – sometimes under the stairs or on a book shelf. My wife was out at work on the evening of the burglary and I was upstairs in the bedroom. I was in the middle of watching a film on TV when I heard the scream, so I went downstairs to the living room, where Charlie was flying around angrily. I turned on the light. I found the window open and my wallet was gone but everything else was ok. That evening, luckily, Charlie chose the living room shelf to sleep on.'

The police are continuing to investigate the burglary. They have found one of the thieves, and are hoping to catch the other. They have warned people who live nearby that it's important to keep their doors and windows locked, and to buy a parrot too, if possible!

For questions 1–3, please answer in complete sentences. (2 marks each)

1. How did the criminals enter Brian's house?

2. What did the burglars steal?

3. What have police told Brian's neighbours to do?
