The Holiday Village of Thorpeness

In 1910, landowner Stuart Ogilvie decided to develop Thorpe, a small fishing village on the east coast of England, into a holiday destination. Most locals at that time were considering leaving Thorpe, because storms often flooded the village. Ogilvie's plan was therefore to completely change the village with stunning architecture, and to build a central lake, to prevent further flooding. He knew he could attract tourists because the area was already known for its birdwatching. He changed the name from Thorpe to Thorpeness, which is now a main attraction in the area.

The lake was built entirely by local workers. Although they used basic, traditional tools, this was not as difficult as it sounds, as the lake is no more than one metre deep in all places, for safety reasons. It is a children's paradise, with sandy beaches and islands with names like Dragon's Den and Wendy's House. This was because Ogilvie's inspiration came from his personal friend JM Barrie, who had written the book Peter Pan, and whose famous novel featured these places.

Ogilvie wanted to create a calm place with outdoor spaces to explore. He had a tennis club, swimming pool and golf course built for guests. The only other coastal golf course in the area is over 25 km away in Southwold. He hired and trained employees who mainly came to work from nearby villages. When Thorpeness was ready, he invited his friends and their families to stay and experience his creation. When he was perfectly happy with it, Thorpeness was opened to the general public.

At first, the only source of water for the houses was a water tower, but Ogilvie thought it was so ugly that he had it re-designed to resemble a cottage on top of a tower. When a proper water system was developed, this was changed into holiday accommodation. It is called the 'House in the Clouds' and is hugely popular with visitors.

In questions 1–3, please answer in complete sentences. (2 marks each)

1. What was the problem for people living in Thorpe?

2. What influenced Ogilvie's design of the lake?

3. Who were the first people to stay as guests in Thorpeness?

A. Although Jakeson's is at the top of a very steep hill, it is worth the effort. If you get lost in all the winding streets, look for the church as Jakeson's is just next door. Inside, there are lots of older, previously-owned books for all tastes and they are all reasonably priced. The café in the basement is popular with young people and has a lively atmosphere. Get there early as the small space fills up quickly.

B. Where do you go for the largest selection of recently-released books on art? The Dominion of course! The high painted ceilings and balconies remind the visitor that this was once a theatre. The huge stage is now used as a reading room, with plenty of space for wooden desks and chairs, which are often occupied by art and drama students. The Dominion is the place to go for works on the European Masters and is surprisingly low cost.

C. Libraria is the oldest bookshop in the country. It has been on the same site for 300 years and, although tiny, the building is beautiful both inside and out. The wooden-panelled walls are lined with a huge selection of cheap books covering everything from travel to sci-fi and they are all new. Here and there are sofas where you can relax and spend hours lost in a book. The children's section is particularly good.

D. If you want to spend a leisurely Sunday looking at books, there is no better place than Matthews Books, a cosy little shop. In addition to the largest collection of averagely-priced, second-hand books in the city, it also sells the latest works by local authors. Staff have written short reviews of many of these to help the customer. These are posted online to help promote the business. You can also order books online and collect in store.

E. Located in what was previously a church, Saint's is run by a welcoming couple whose love of books is obvious. They are always ready to recommend something to their customers. The shop is light and airy with beautiful, coloured windows but the reading space is not so big. Although their prices are on the high side, the selection is amazing. The books are all older editions. There is an excellent café next door.
