I live with my wife and two children. We don't have a garden but we live next to a park. The children like taking our neighbour's dog there. I'm a nurse in a hospital near my house so I go to work on foot. I enjoy my job because I like helping people. In my free time, I love playing football and basketball with my friends. My wife and I like cooking. I don't eat meat or fish, but I eat lots of pasta, vegetables and fruit.

Alan (A)

I live with my parents and sister in a house with a large garden. Our three dogs like playing in it. I work in a shop and get there on the bus. My job's not very interesting and I'm often bored. At the weekends, I play the guitar with my friends. My sister plays tennis but I'm not keen on sport. My father is a good cook and makes delicious hamburgers. I also like eating chicken and pizza.

City Farms

The countryside has many farms but there are also farms in cities. City farms allow people who live in crowded places to feel closer to nature, grow or buy their own food and see animals.

City farms are charities, so they do not receive money from the government. There are about 120 city farms in the UK. The first of these opened in Kentish Town in north London in 1972. When people in east London saw how successful the farm was, they started Hackney City Farm in 1984. They bought the site, which was an old car park.

Some London farms have more than 150 animals. Hackney City Farm is very popular and is open for visits from Tuesday to Sunday. Local people can learn to paint, ride horses or repair bicycles there. The farm also has a shop, which sells its own fruit and vegetables, and a café. Just five miles from Hackney is Mudchute Farm, which is the biggest in Europe.

Yasmin often visits Mudchute. She says, 'I live in a tiny flat. I come here at weekends because unfortunately I don't have a garden. My favourite thing is the classes. I'm learning how to grow vegetables and keep bees. I've never done these things before and they are great fun. People here are very friendly.'

For questions 1–3, please answer in complete sentences. (2 marks each)

1. How many city farms are there in the United Kingdom now?

2. When did the first city farm in the United Kingdom start?

3. Which city farm is the largest in Europe?
