Flying High

Rumeysa Gelgi has always wanted to travel by plane. She was hoping to fly in 2020 but her plans had to be changed because of the Covid 19 pandemic. In September 2022, Rumeysa was delighted to finally be taking off on a plane.

In October 2021, Rumeysa was given the official title of 'the tallest woman in the world'. She is an amazing 2.15 metres tall. The tallest woman who has ever lived was Zeng Jinlian from China. She was 2.46 metres tall and died in 1982. The tallest man in the world today, who is 2.51 metres, is Turkish. This is the same nationality as Rumeysa. Being tall can cause many problems and, although Rumeysa's height doesn't prevent her getting on a plane, the seats and space around them are not big enough for her.

Rumeysa has a very unusual medical condition called Weaver Syndrome. At 17, she became the world's tallest teenager, but nobody else in her family is unusually tall. She cannot walk far without support and has to use a wheelchair to travel. Rumeysa has had no problems working in the computer industry as a web developer, as she can work from home, but she dreamed of travelling to California, USA to work. She knew it would be difficult to get there.

Luckily, Turkish Airlines offered to assist her and removed six seats, which meant that she could lie down. The staff and other passengers were really interested in learning about Rumeysa during her first-ever flight from Turkey, which was a non-stop, 13-hour journey to the USA. Now working in the USA, Rumeysa plans to fly again. She would like to visit the UK and has always wanted to travel to Iceland.

For questions 1–3, please answer in complete sentences. (2 marks each)

1. When was Rumeysa named as the world's tallest woman?

2. What is the reason for Rumeysa's height?

3. Which countries did she fly from and to on her first flight?
