Teenagers Lead Climate Protest

Over the past few years, climate change protests have been held worldwide, from Milan to Dubai. In Manchester recently, hundreds of teenagers organised a significant event to highlight the issue. Wanting to send a message to people in power, they walked through the city, holding signs and shouting environmental messages. As it was a busy afternoon, the size of the crowd stopped traffic.

The teenagers are worried about the Earth's future, and parents and schools support their actions. 16-year old, Maya Patel, who organised the event with a school friend Alex Ramirez, said, 'Leaders just aren't doing enough and governments need to make major changes.'

Alex explained, 'We want the government to make climate change a subject students must learn at school. In addition, we want the age of voting lowered to 16 so that we are involved in decision-making.' This isn't an isolated case, as teenagers have a history of climate protest. Most famous is probably Greta Thunberg and her powerful words at the 2019 Climate Action Summit. However, Severn Suzuki's famous speech in Brazil, calling for leaders to act, happened 27 years before that. In 2007, 15-year-old Slater Jewell-Kemker started making her first film about climate change.

During the recent event, teenagers talked to people about why it's important to take care of the Earth. They gave out information about climate change on recycled paper and educated those who wanted to know more. 'We want to teach people about how they can help,' Alex said.

After the walk, there was a meeting in the city square. Maya spoke on stage, saying, 'We would like everyone to be silent for one minute. During these few seconds, please think about what you can change in your lives to help the planet.' The teenagers aren't stopping there. There are plans for concerts and online events so even more people can access their message and make changes to how they look after the planet.

In questions 1-3, write your answer in the box. (2 marks each)

1. Where and at what time of day did the teenagers hold their event?

2. What changes to the law do the teenagers want?

3. What events do the teenagers want to organise next?

A. This last weekend has been fantastic! I met my lovely girlfriend at the airport as she was coming home from a long business trip. She had been out of the country for almost two weeks. Although we had stayed in contact by video messages, it's not the same. I miss her when she's not here. We're going to celebrate later in the week at her favourite restaurant, when she's recovered from all that travelling.

B. I didn't have a great weekend. All of the family went out on Saturday to a restaurant. The food was incredible and we all had a lovely time. Unfortunately, as I left the restaurant, I fell down the steps outside and hurt my ankle. It was incredibly painful, so my brother took me to hospital. It turns out I've broken it! Now I probably won't be able to go with my friends on their camping trip.

C. Dear diary, please let's have another weekend like the last one. I received a new hearing aid, and it's so much better than the old one. I can hear more of what people are saying and I don't have to ask them to repeat. I still look at their mouth when they're speaking but this new device is going to make a big difference when I go to university next month. I'm now looking forward to it!

D. I'm happy to be back after that weekend in a tent! My sister promised me an amazing time in the forest, but to be honest, it was terrible. The tent fell down and a huge hole was made in the side. The rain was awful and everything we had got wet. Despite all this drama, spending time with my sister was really nice. I think we understand each other better and plan to be kinder to each other in the future.

E. Last weekend, I decided to take a bicycle trip on my own. The sun was shining, so I thought I would take my chance before any bad weather started. I cycled up and down hills and along small rivers. I was out for hours. I had a little bit of lunch while I was sitting next to the river. Even when I got home, the sun was still out – but I was exhausted!
